

By proceeding to allow this, the FCC would make a mockery of it's standing since the airwaves belong to the public - not to a few. If the FCC should it allow a few companies to won our public airwaves, it is imperative to the Fourth Estate to not allow this to happen. Many of these companies cite freedom of speech in order to take over the airwaves and press. To give these priveledges away to a few is exactly the opposite. If a handful are allowed to take them over, then what is left for the rext of the almost 300 million people, common citizen's right to speak, since they will have the ability and almost all of the entire bandwidth to shout us down?